The Songs of Christmas

The words to Handel's "Messiah" were supplied by Charles Jennens, a noted librettist of the 18th century and something of a dandy. Servants preceded Jennens when he alighted from his grand carriage, removing oyster shells and other litter from his path.

Handel shut himself off from the world completely during his work on "The Messiah." Often as not he left untouched the food brought him by his manservant. He completed the oratorio in 24 days, a stupendous task.

THE STORY: Tommy Conroy, while on a spree, lost or spent $300 of some money entrusted to him by the jewel firm of Trumbull & Company, where he and his wife Alma are employed. To make up the loss, Alma takes some of her discarded jewels to a gold-buying firm, but upon arrival she finds the proprietor murdered and lying on the floor is a fancy cuff-link, one of a pair she had designed and given to Tommy.

Russian Bloc Loses On Two Key Issues In Heated Session

PARIS, Dec. 20 - (AP) - The United Nations handed two defeats to the Soviet bloc today. Greece defeated White Russia for a seat in the U. N. security council. This gave the United States one of its hardest-won victories in a contest which split London and Washington temporarily and provoked screams of protest from Moscow.

Final Vote 39-16

The final vote was 39 for Greece to 16 for White Russia. Four countries abstained and South Africa was absent. This made the total thirds majority was 37, giving Board To Aid Greece two more than necessary.

Interpreting The News By SIGRID ARNE

Associated Press News Analyst

(For J. M. Roberts, Jr.) Now that th exchange of prisoners has at least a start in Korea, the truce negotiators face cracking a much tougher nut. They must work out some sort of supervision of the armistice. If they succeed they will have forced the Communist world to back down on one of its cardinal principles, -secrecy. Foreingers would be permitted not only to travel over Red territory, but inspect Red communication centers.

For that reason the talks ahead may be more difficult than the ones which resulted in an exchange of prisoner-of-war lists. And as usual, in dealing with Communists, U. S. negotiatiors are wary of delays and traps.

So far the U. N. has been represented in these armistice supervision talks by Maj. Gen. Howard M. Turner. He has had had to do some straight talking. Nothing seems jelled, except that both sides appear to agree there must be supervision.

Here are the major points which Gen. Turner is asking:

1. Unlimited rotation of U. N. troops. At first the Reds objected, and then conceded the U. N. could rotate 5,000 troops a month. Turner rejects any limit. 2. The U. N. wants the right of air reconnaissance for the supervision authority. It is a natural hedge since several times in the past year U. N. planes have spotted long, new, Red supply conveys coming down through North Korea. 3. The U. N. wants free supervision of all ports of entry whether by land, sea or air, and supervision of all important communications centers. 4. The U. N. wants agreement that both sides will stop all new airport construction. The Reds are building three new air strips in North Korea for the new jets that are showing up in This program, Turner's team thinks, would prevent the Reds from building up any surprise attack in North Korea. Of course these agreements would have to be a two-way street, if they are ever made. If observers can inspect a Red communications center, they can also look over a U. N. center. The Reds have made practically no commitments on this program except that there should be supervision. From that they moved to jockeying for the type of team that would do the inspecting. The Communists have suggested that people from "neutral" nations sit on the supervision authority. They named Poland and Czechoslovakia, two Communist satellite nations, as "neutral." Washington has asked that the nations be picked from "nonbelligerents," and they defined them as nations which have no troops in Korea. As a first step Washington has asked the governments of Sweden, Norway, and Switzerland, if they would be willing of appoint people to a Korean supervision board.

Obviously if the Communists could "stack" the supervision committee, the rules would mean little or nothing. There is no way of knowing now how the Reds will act in the talks ahead. They did turn in prisoner-of-war lists after days of stalemated talks. These debates grew so bitter that Allied spokesmen accused the Communists of trying to blackmail the U. N. by using the prisoners as a "human club' 'to force the free world to accept Communist terms for policing the truce.

Now, at any rate, the Communists have turned over names of the prisoners they say they hold, without gaining any concession on the supervision machinery.

If the final agreement permits free movement of observers in all Korea, the U. N. negotiators will have gained more than just a Korean armistice; they will have froced the Communists to abandon at least part of their secrecy in a small portion of the
